HBK Update, Friday 24 April

Dear Parents and Carers

We very much hope you are keeping safe and well.

Just a reminder that in addition to HBK teachers setting work for students, BBC Bitesize is a good source of learning activities for students (see my last ParentMail sent on Monday this week for details of the BBC Bitesize service).

We are also looking at the Oak Academy online lessons, which involve live teaching of a number of subjects and it is likely that at least some departments will signpost these for our students as part of the school-work they should be doing during lockdown.

Design Technology and Art teachers at HBK have been coordinating two extraordinary projects that involve making visors and 'scrubs' for key workers in the Health Service locally, and other HBK staff have been helping on a rota basis. This is really valuable work and work that we are proud of! You may have seen that we featured in the Hunts Post and Daily Telegraph this week for our making of visors for the National Health Service! In case not, please see the attached articles.

We intend to send you a brief survey next Monday to ask how you feel the school is doing during lockdown and whether there is anything you think we can improve.

A special thank you to all students who are doing everything that their teachers are asking of them in these challenging times. Well done to you!

We are Hinchingsbrooke.

Best wishes

Mark Patterson
